Hints to Mushroom Growers.

In turning up a portion of a bed maggots may be discovered in the manure. A few may do no perceptible harm, but a large number will eat up the spawn, leaving not even a thread to develop a single mushroom. Many kinds of insects are apt to swarm in warm cellars, together with the egg laying varieties which cause the maggots, regardless of foul air which may often accumulate and which is an injury to the mushrooms. In each succeeding bed in large cellars insects follow up the new beds and become more vigorous. A high temperature such as we had last fall is conducive to their continued existence in summer garb. A good crop, however, can be secured in spite of them when the houses are kept at all times cool.

When mushrooms are grown in glass houses the return pipes are best run under the walks. In the usual way of heating, where the pipes run under the benches, paper placed over the beds will be found beneficial as a protector from excessive heat and drying. With good, vigorous spawn, properly prepared compost and care about the requirements of heat and moisture, a good crop is a positive certainty. There are garden crops equal to it not surpassing the mushroom as money makers to the producer, but no one need complain of well managed mushrooms.

EASILY DECIDED.

This Question Should Be Answered Easily By Barre People.

Which is wiser—to have confidence in the opinions of your fellow-citizens, or people you know, or depend on statements made by utter strangers reading in far-away places? Read the following:

Mrs. T. D. Strout of 137 Seminary street, Barre, Vt., says: "My kidneys were affected for about five years, causing me a great deal of pain in the small of my back. I would have such sharp twinges shoot through me when I attempted to stoop or lift anything that I had to rest until the attack passed off. I was so nervous I could not sleep nights but tossed and turned continually. I was so much impressed by what I read about Don't Kidney Pills curing others that I got a box of E. A. Drown's drug store. After using them there was a noticeable change for the better in my condition and I continued taking the remedy until the pains in my back disappeared. I could do my household work with ease and could sleep well nights. For backache and kidney trouble Drown's Kidney Pills are excellent."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Drown's—and take no other.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"Human Hearts" at Barre Opera House Saturday, Afternoon and Evening.

Any play that teaches a great moral lesson is bound to do good to a community. Some of the greatest sermons ever preached against evil deeds and associates are embodied in the plays of the stage. The lesson of life is presented to the listener in a way that makes an impression on the mind and gives him food for thought. While the spectator is listening to the text of the play, his visual sense is being attracted by seeing the scenes enacted before his eyes, that are being described in the words to which he is listening.

In such a play as "Human Hearts" which will be shown at the opera house next Saturday, matinee and night the contrast between virtue and vice is sharply drawn. The author has not minced matters in drawing his characters, and as the incidents of the play are based on real occurrences, he has not had to draw upon his imagination to invent a motive for "Human Hearts."

The characters of Jeanette and Frederick Armadale in "Human Hearts" should be carefully studied by everyone. We meet their prototypes in daily life, in nearly all large communities. How often do we see men and women who, with all the advantages of education, comfortable homes, and the loving care of parents and friends, still go astray, and sink low and lower in the social scales, until they reach the lowest depths of degradation. We meet them every day.

Another novel character drawing in this play is that of Jim Mason; a man born amidst the lowest surroundings, with no advantage in early life, knowing nothing of the difference between right and wrong; a criminal because he has had no opportunities to be anything else. But here is a character that conspires to better things. The inherent instinct to raise himself above the level of his surroundings is lying dormant, but, when the realization of the difference between right and wrong is brought home to him, he chooses the proper path.

Hoyt's "A Bunch of Keys."

Take a series of clever complications, and a bunch of comedians, stir in a hand full of catchy songs, mix with several shapely choruses, place on a stage dressed with handsome costumes, and you have the average comedy. Take all the above and add to them the magic of Charles H. Hoyt's name and the fame of Gus Bostner and "A Bunch of Keys" easily makes the fun-making vehicle of the decade. Manager Hoban of the opera house has secured it for an attraction on Monday evening, Oct. 12th.

"A Bunch of Keys" is a screaming, scorching comedy, brimful of excitement, laughter and enjoyment. It was written in Hoyt's best vein and the years have not dimmed its brilliancy. A treat is in store for all who go to witness the antics of Grimes, the machinations of Littleton Snags and the delightful ingenuities of Teddy, Rose and May Keys. Manager Bostner has engaged a brilliant company of players who will introduce refined specialties and render a score of the latest popular songs and ballads. "A Bunch of Keys" is a perennial delight, and it occupies a place by itself in the history of American stage lore. No farce comedy has been presented with success so continuously and none deserves better appreciation.

USEFUL SONG BIRDS.

Easy to Show They Have an Actual Money Value.

In his war against insects man's most valuable ally is the bird. The greater number of birds live on insects. Even those which live on seeds when fully grown are fed on insects while in the nest. As young birds grow fast it takes many a worm to satisfy their hearty appetites.

A feature of the warfare of bird on bug is the system with which it is carried on. Nothing is haphazard, but each species of bird has its own field of work and in many instances certain insects to which it is partial. In winter, when there seems to be no activity on the part of the insects, one might expect the birds to take a rest, but there is no cessation in the work of those which live on insects found on the bark of trees.

Watch a flock of chickadees, they alight in a tree and examine each twig for grubs or eggs, the little black eyes rarely missing a mouthful of food. Birds even swing head down from the branches that the underside may not escape inspection. Nuthatches and brown creepers explore the trunk and with their long, sharp bills dig many an insect from its winter quarters. The woodpeckers have a work all their own. The small, downy woodpecker is a good representative of his family. His bill is strong and sharp. His tail feathers are stiffened to serve as a brace while he clings upright against the trunk. He cocks his head to one side, and his quick ears hear a borer under the bark. A few blows with the bill and a hole is dug; then a long tongue barbed at the tip is shot out, and the borer is speared and snatched from its resting place.

As insects increase with the coming of warmer weather, birds return from the south to fight them. One watches the cheerful robin hepping over the lawn. He listens an instant, then pokes his bill deep into the ground. Up comes his head, and he has captured a worm. The flicker, though a woodpecker, is an imitator of the robin. He is fond of ants, and his big bill makes a good pick to dig them from their hills. Meadow larks and quails live entirely on insects found close to the ground. Were these birds strictly protected in the southwest instead of being hunted the boll weevil might not have things quite so much his own way in the cotton fields.

The trees when in foliage are full of birds. Small warblers and vireos take care of eggs and little worms, while thrushes, orioles and catbirds attend to those of larger size. The rose breasted grosbeak earns the right to favor by the way he eats potato bugs. Some birds cannot eat hairy caterpillars, but they are a choice delicacy to the cuckoo, which slips quietly through the trees as it hunts for them.

Insects on the wing are not safe, for swallows and swifts in rapid flight skim back and forth over the meadows and without pausing catch many a small goat. The birds called flycatchers also take their prey on wing, but they remain quiet on a perch and only swoop down on insects which come near at hand.

Leg Accidents.

The right leg is far more subject to accidents than the left. It has been found that the ratio is about thirteen serious accidents to the right leg to three to the left.

The Pamirs.

The Pamirs, sometimes called the "Roof of the World," consist of a number of bleak plateaus and shallow valleys situated about 13,000 feet above sea level. They lie to the north of India.
